About the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association UK

CPA UK is one of the largest and most active branches in the CPA community and delivers a unique annual international outreach programme in Westminster and overseas. CPA UK works to encourage parliamentary diplomacy and build parliamentary capacity on behalf of the UK Parliament and the wider CPA. Through activities such as conferences, seminars, delegations and parliamentary strengthening teams, CPA UK provides Members with a practical, current and first-hand perspective on international issues facing fellow parliamentarians across the Commonwealth. Working with CPA UK's international outreach programmes also enhances Members' understanding of issues facing diaspora communities in their own constituencies. ## Summary

From 13 to 17 March 2017, CPA UK and CPA Scotland hosted a delegation of Members of the Federal Parliament of Canada. The delegation consisted of eight members of the Canada-United Kingdom Inter-Parliamentary Association and five members of the Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association. The focus of the visit was on the UK's decision to exit the European Union. The main discussions evolved around the implications of Brexit, the relationships between Westminster and the devolved legislatures, international trade, UK/Canada trade as well as the Canada-European Union Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA). The visit helped deepen bilateral relations between UK and Canadian parliamentarians on issues of common interest.

Project Overview

- 1.01. CPA UK and CPA Canada have a long history of facilitating successful thematic parliamentary bilateral delegations on behalf of their respective legislatures.
- 1.02. The Parliament of Canada was keen to continue to strengthen the relationship with its UK counterpart as well as Commonwealth organisations and institutions based in the UK.
- 1.03. In March 2016, a delegation from the Federal Parliament of Canada visited the UK as an introduction to the UK Parliament, to engage on issues of mutual interest and strengthen the bilateral relationship following the UK and Canadian General Elections. This was followed by a visit from the Public Accounts Committee of the Federal Parliament of Canada in December 2016.
- 1.04. In October 2016, a delegation from the UK Parliament visited Ottawa and Quebec, focusing on parliamentary management and issues of mutual interest such as devolution, the representation of women in parliament, and energy security.
- 1.05. This programme focused on increasing the Parliament of Canada's awareness of issues stemming from the UK's decision to exit the European Union, the implications for international trade between Canada and the UK, and how Brexit will affect the Canada-European Union Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA).
- 1.06. Following the Westminster based programme facilitated by CPA UK, the Canadian delegation visited the Scottish Parliament. The programme in Holyrood was facilitated by CPA Scotland.

Project Aim & Objectives

  - a. To understand the next steps for the UK's withdrawal from the European Union.
  - b. To explore the impact of Brexit on key policy areas in the UK through discussion with parliamentary counterparts, civil society organisations, and think tanks.
  - c. To explore the role of the EU-Canada Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA) and the evolution of the trade relationship between Canada and the United Kingdom.
  - d. To explore the impact of the UK's withdrawal from the European Union on relationships between Westminster and devolved legislatures, including with the Scottish Parliament.

Key Issues

Implications of Brexit

4.01. Delegates were interested in the underlying issues that led to the outcome of the Brexit referendum, the negotiation process, and the wider implications Brexit could have both domestically and internationally.

4.02. Delegates met with Rt Hon. Alistair Carmichael MP, member of the Exiting European Union Committee, and the Clerk of the Committee, James Rhys. Mr Rhys first clarified the remit of the Committee was to examine the expenditure, administration and policy of the Department for Exiting the European Union. He explained the make-up of the Committee and how it differed from other parliamentary committees in that the committee consisted of 21 members, twelve of which voted to “remain” and nine voted to “leave” the EU. Mr Rhys provided delegates with an insight into the challenges faced by the committee, an update on the progress made with its research and its next steps. The delegates were interested in hearing more on the role of the Committee once the UK withdraws from the EU. Mr Carmichael explained that the Committee will focus on scrutinising the Exiting the European Union department following its official withdrawal. Delegates were also interested to know if the average British citizen’s concern over Brexit and its consequences go beyond that of the referendum. Mr Carmichael explained how his perception is that issues such as immigration and trade have become more prominent topics of discussion since the referendum but interest does not go beyond that.

4.03 A meeting with the Chair and members of the UK-Europe All Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) and members of Open Britain provided the perspective of those who advocated for the UK to remain in the European Union during the referendum. Delegates were interested in the underlying issues that triggered the referendum. Anna Soubry MP explained that she believes that many people attached the perceived problems of the UK to its membership of the EU, assuming that these issues would disappear upon exiting. Ms Soubry expressed concerns for the future, anticipating a ‘hard’ Brexit would bring adverse effects. Members of the APPG expressed their preference to remain in the Single Market but conveyed their doubts of the likelihood of this, speculating that the outcome of the negotiations with the EU would not be favourable towards the UK.

4.04 A meeting with Henry Newman, Director of Open Europe, provided an independent analysis of the events surrounding Brexit. Mr Newman explained that Prime Minister Rt Hon. Theresa May MP had been successful in uniting the Conservative Party since the referendum and since becoming its leader. He identified that the Prime Minister was mainly endorsing the concept of sovereignty and its vantages in terms of immigration policy; financial contributions to the EU and jurisdiction of courts. Delegates were interested in knowing Mr Newman's outlook on the implications of Brexit. He explained the difficulty of foreseeing the implications at this point but expects it to be a difficult few years ahead for the UK. He further explained that the balance of power in Europe was seen to be triangular, consisting of the UK, France and Germany and that the elections in France, the Netherlands and Germany were increasing uncertainty for the UK and Europe. He suggested that Brexit and the elections in 2017 across Europe will have an impact on this balance of power and the wider EU stability.

4.05 The implications of Brexit were also discussed widely in Scotland. A meeting with Per Johansson, the Head of the Information Office for the European Parliament in Edinburgh, provided delegates a viewpoint from the EU's perspective. Mr Johansson explained that EU law continued to apply in the UK, as there hadn't been any changes within the UK formally and legally although politically there had been a clear shift. He explained how Article 50 was a procedural process but was rather vague because it was drafted with the belief that it would not be triggered, which fed into the uncertainty surrounding Brexit. Delegates were interested to know whether negotiations could begin before Article 50 was triggered; Mr Johansson explained that the legal procedure is that no negotiations are to start before Article 50 is triggered. Upon triggering the Article, terms of negotiations will need to be agreed by the end of the two year period - if an agreement is not reached the UK will withdraw from the EU without a deal. Delegates inquired if the EU would be open to Scotland joining if they were to gain independence. Mr Johansson explained that nothing was certain at this stage and that opinion on this matter could differ greatly.

International Trade & CETA

4.06. The delegation was interested in the implications of Brexit on international trade as well as the EU and Canada's Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement (CETA). CETA is a free trade agreement between Canada and the EU; it was signed in October 2016 and was ratified by the European Parliament on 15 February 2017<sup>1</sup>.

4.07. Delegates met with the Chair of the International Trade Committee, Angus MacNeil MP, and members Liam Byrne MP and Nigel Evans MP. Mr MacNeil explained the remit of the Committee and its recent developments. He highlighted that the Committee had recently conducted an inquiry into UK trade following the EU referendum. Delegates were interested to know the fiscal implications of Brexit on the devolved legislatures, particularly in regards to the relationship between the Republic of Ireland and

<sup>1</sup> European Commission via http://ec.europa.eu/trade/policy/in-focus/ceta/index\_en.htm 12/07/2017

Northern Ireland, and with Scotland should it gain independence. Members of the Committee explained that borders between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland was proving to be a contentious issue and it was unclear whether the Good Friday Agreement would still be effective following a hard Brexit. Mr Byrne further suggested that although Brexit will affect the terms of trade and migration of labour in the UK, he believed that the principle of free movement as it stands was not sustainable within the EU, at which point the UK may renegotiate its position within the EU. Delegates questioned whether the UK would seek an agreement with the EU similar to CETA. Members of the Committee noted it being a possible notion but stated that it was too early to determine this. Although it was made clear by members of the Committee that at the current stage there was more uncertainty on the implications than certainty, both the delegates and the members of the Committee highlighted the opportunity for increased bilateral trade between Canada and the UK.

4.08. The delegation also met with Dominic Webb, specialist on international trade in the House of Commons Library. Mr Webb explained the effects of Brexit on trade and highlighted the terms of CETA. He reiterated the UK's hopes for continued free trade with Canada after Brexit and explained, although official trade talks cannot go ahead before the withdrawal, initial discussions began early this year.

4.09. In Scotland, the delegation met with the Convener of the Economy, Jobs and Fair Work Committee, Gordon Lindhurst MSP, and members Bill Bowman MSP and Andy Wightman MSP. Mr Lindhurst highlighted the Committee's recent inquiry into the economic impact leaving the EU will have on Scotland. Mr Lindhurst explained that 4% of workers in Scotland are EU nationals, with some areas of Scotland relying heavily on them especially as many young Scottish nationals move to London for work. Mr Lindhurst explained how the Committee had been looking into how to maintain Scotland's economy after Brexit and one of its suggestions was to increase the number of trade representatives from Europe in Scotland. The delegation were also interested at knowing more on the Committee's findings on employment in Scotland. Mr Lindhurst highlighted that the labour market had significantly changed in the last 20 years, with London existing as an economic powerhouse, the rest of the country had "lagged behind".

The Relationship between Devolved Legislatures and Westminster

4.10. The delegation were keen to explore the impact of the UK's withdrawal from the European Union on devolved legislatures and their relationship with Westminster.

4.11. The delegation met with Laurence Robertson MP, Chair of the Select Committee on Northern Ireland Affairs in the House of Commons. Delegates were interested in the political situation in Northern Ireland following their general election of 2 March 2017. Mr Robertson described the structure of the Northern Ireland Assembly and process of selection of the First Minister and their Deputy. He explained that with the recent election, the position of Deputy First Minister was not being agreed in protest of the selected First Minister. In the situation where an agreement is not reached, Mr Robertson explained that a new general election may be possible or Northern Ireland may have to assume direct rule by Westminster.

Delegates were also interested in the implications of Brexit on the borders between Northern Ireland and Ireland. Mr Robertson expressed that relations with Ireland transcend that of the EU and does not suspect that the current arrangements would change after withdrawing from the EU.

4.12. The delegation also met with the Select Committee on Scottish Affairs in the House of Commons. Delegates were keen to discuss the recent announcement that First Minister Nicola Sturgeon was seeking a second Independence referendum. Delegates were interested in knowing if staying a member of the EU was a higher priority for the SNP Government than having devolved powers similar to that of Quebec. Members of the Committee expressed their concerns about the possibility of being unable to retain their devolved powers with the direction of the current Government moving towards Brexit and perceived higher levels of interference from Westminster in matters that should be devolved, for example education. Delegates were interested in knowing why the Scottish Parliament was keen to recede its domestic powers to the EU and not the UK where there was a shared heritage and culture. Members of the Committee indicated that as the results of the Brexit referendum suggested, the desire of most Scots was to remain in the EU as 62% voted remain. A meeting with the Associate Director of the Centre on Constitutional Change, Professor Nicola McEwen, gave the background context to Scotland's 2014 referendum on independence and a perspective on how Brexit provided an incentive to call for a second independence referendum given that the majority of the Scottish people did not vote to leave the EU.

Outcomes

5.01. Delegates noted their appreciation of the cross-party representation in all sessions and the diverse range of views that they were exposed to. They relayed that the programme made apparent, more than ever, that the implications of Brexit were multifaceted and currently shrouded by uncertainty.

5.02. Delegates were keen to have further discussions with UK Parliamentarians on trade and welcomed further bilateral engagement.

Next Steps

6.01. CPA UK will continue engaging with CPA Canada and the Canada NATO Parliamentary Association to facilitate opportunities for further bilateral engagement.

Acknowledgements

7.01. CPA UK would like to thank all the speakers who attended the sessions for their time and expertise. CPA UK would like to thank CPA Scotland for hosting the delegation and facilitating the meetings in Edinburgh. Thanks are also given to the Federal Parliament of Canada, CPA Canada, the Canada NATO Parliamentary Association, and the Canadian High Commission in London for their roles in developing and supporting the programme.
