Together, we can raise awareness on the issue of human trafficking through sport.

Meet the Team Leader

Speaking to Adeline Dumoulin: The Young Tennis Player who is now Tackling Human Trafficking Through Sport

A few years ago, I had a conversation with Lerina Bright, the CEO of Mission 89, in London. It was then that I realised the scale of the issue of human trafficking through sports.

I love sports and have practiced many of them. As a child, I was a talented tennis player, to the extent of imagining myself becoming a professional athlete one day.

So, I can already imagine the excitement for the 2022 Birmingham Games amongst young people around the Commonwealth.

Sport is part of us. Sport brings nations and communities together. It brings smiles to our faces and warms our hearts.

CPA UK started working with Mission 89 with one objective: To prevent talented players and individuals becoming victims of human trafficking within the context of sport.

Sport is part of us.
Sport brings nations and communities together.
It brings smiles to our faces and warms our hearts.

Unfortunately, major sporting events are an opportunity for unscrupulous criminals to exploit young athletes and people willing to take part of these events.

To tackle human trafficking through sport, it is fundamental that the right people are aware of and are knowledgeable on what sports trafficking is, how to detect it, and how to prevent it.

The 'right people' are everywhere:

- Parliamentarians
- Border force officials
- High Commissions
- Constituents
- Communities
- Charities
- Businesses

It is also essential they work collaboratively and support each other by raising awareness around them.

We know that you are the drivers of positive change in your countries.

Therefore, it is my sincere hope that these resources will prove informative and insightful on the many ways we can all together mitigate risks associated with human trafficking through sport ahead of mega sporting events.

I encourage you to read the resources, share them with your peers, colleagues, parents and guardians, schoolteachers, sport coaches, and community members.

Encourage discussions on the issue and do contact CPA UK or Mission 89 for any additional support.

Thank you.

Meet Lerina Bright

Speaking to Lerina Bright: The CEO of Mission 89 working in partnership with CPA UK to tailor communication products

Human trafficking is complex, and combatting it requires multi-stakeholder action and cooperation.

Effective communication is key, and so we have strived to develop communications products that are clear, concise and reflect the perspective of the key stakeholders that play an important role in preventing trafficking through sport.

A Diplomatic Message

Foreign, Commonwealth
& Development Office

The Foreign, Commonwealth, and Development Office share a few words about tackling modern slavery.

The Foreign, Commonwealth, and Development Office is committed to confronting the scourge of modern-day slavery and remain at the heart of the UK's global efforts on tackling modern slavery.

Bringing substantial resources to bear in addressing this global challenge, we have supported over 120 modern slavery programmes and projects in almost every region in the world and in many Commonwealth countries since 2017.

Through both diplomacy and development, we and our friends and partners are working hard to ensure respect for, and protection and fulfilment of, people's fundamental human rights in the Commonwealth.

We are proud of what we have achieved to date but know we, the Commonwealth, and the international community, still have further to go. That is why we support CPA-UK's work to shine a light on the challenges and raise awareness of what works to address them.

The Work of Others

The Human Trafficking Foundation

The Human Trafficking Foundation (HTF) aims to support and add value to the work of many charities and agencies operating to combat human trafficking in the UK.

The charity grew out of the work of the All-Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) on Human Trafficking and Modern Slavery.

The Foundation bring together NGOs, local authorities, law enforcement, academics and other experts through the anti-trafficking and modern slavery sector.

The Human Trafficking Foundation has three main objectives: helping to shape policy and legislation, providing a voice among NGOs, civil society NGOs, civil society, and voluntary organisations fighting modern day slavery so that shortcomings in current policy can be identified and addressed, and identifying opportunities for new and different types of intervention within the rapidly evolving landscape of human trafficking.

The Human Trafficking Foundation does countless activities across the country to try and tackle the issue of human trafficking. This includes writing reports, setting up campaigns, writing newsletters and holding award ceremonies.

Victim Fund

The Human Trafficking Foundation set up the Victim Fund to help survivors of human trafficking and modern slavery with small one-off grants to help meet their immediate needs.

The Work of Others

UK APPG on Human Trafficking and Modern Slavery

The Foundation is the secretariat for the APPG on Human Trafficking and Modern Slavery.

This group was significant in the passage of the Modern Slavery Act, ensuring important clauses were added to the original draft. It now looks to ensure effective implementation.

UK National Advisory Forum

This is a group made up of organisations across the sector, to help discuss and keep up to date with policy developments. It allows for (or facilitates) networking and dialogue with Parliamentarians and policymakers, bringing together over 90 NGOs, academics, police, civil servants and other experts.

National Network Coordinators Forum

The National Network Coordinators' Anti-Slavery and Human Trafficking Forum (NNCF) brings together the coordinators of 26 anti-slavery multi-agency partnerships from around the UK.

The aim is to raise awareness of policy development, promote cooperation between regions and share best practice as well as build on learning from experiences.
