Ukrainian Children at Increased Risk of Trafficking

Disappearing into a black hole amid the scale of movement:

In 6 weeks, 4.8 million Ukrainian children have fled home. This is what organisations are doing to tackle the vulnerabilities of human trafficking.

Two-thirds of Ukraine's children have now fled their homes. In the six weeks since Russia invaded Ukraine, 2 million children have left the Ukrainian borders, and 2.8 remain displaced within the country.

Today, 4.8 million Ukrainian children are at an increased risk of being trafficked. The combination of mass displacement, desperate parents sending their children across borders with no one to meet them on the other side, and the chaos of volunteers coordinating transport between themselves, all point to vulnerabilities where children can easily go missing.

Katy Fallon, a Guardian journalist, reports that "At nearly every train station near border crossings, crowds of people, often men, hold cardboard signs offering refugees lifts to destinations across Europe"

Though there are charities working on the ground to make passages safer, such as Homo Faber, a human rights organisation based in Poland.

However, Karolina Wierzbińska a coordinator from Homo Faber, said that "it is "impossible to vet every person offering to drive refugees to friends or family before they picked people up."

The combination of mass displacement, desperate parents sending their children across borders with no one to meet them on the other side, and the chaos of volunteers coordinating transport between themselves, all point to vulnerabilities where children can easily go missing.

"We believe traffickers and recruiters are most probably targeting both women traveling alone and women traveling with children," says Monika Molnarova, a member of the Stop Human Trafficking team at Caritas Slovakia.

A Unicef spokesperson, Joe English, explained that the scale of the movement and displacement of children, young people, and adults is presenting considerable challenges for registering and safely processing refugees at borders.

This means it is much more difficult to identify unaccompanied children, or children separated from the group.

One way UNICEF is addressing this is by setting up 'Blue Dot' refugee support centres in neighbouring countries alongside the routes taken by fleeing refugees.

Each Blue Dot centre is set up and run in collaboration with local, regional, or national organisations and partners.

A look inside Westminster: Select Committee Hearing Exercise

Delegates from around the Commonwealth listen as sports regulation expert Dr. Yilmaz provides evidence as a Witness.

Practice Makes Progress

This unique opportunity in exploring the issues of human trafficking through sports brought with it unique insights.

At CPA UK's flagship event Westminster Seminar, the Modern Slavery conducted a Select Committee Hearing on the issues of Trafficking through Sport.

With 10 volunteers acting as members and 150 hybrid participants, the exercise was an opportunity to learn about both the functioning of a select committee and the issue of sports trafficking.

"The exercise was an opportunity to learn about both the functioning of a select committee and the issue of sports trafficking"

Lerina Bright provides evidence during the Select Committee Hearing Exercise as a Witness.

The exercise had two witnesses, Lerina Bright, CEO of Mission 89 and Dr. Serhat Yilmaz, Lecturer in Sports Law from Loughborough University.

The facilitating clerk, Stephanie Woodrow from the Home Affairs Committee, conducted a freeze-frame exercise throughout the hearing, encouraging members and witnesses to reflect and discuss the exercise as it took place.

Participants were provided with instant feedback, such as on their technique and approach to questioning.

In creating a learning space, all participants - whether acting as witnesses, members, or observers - had the opportunity to experience and navigate the process of a select committee hearing.

During the Exercise, vital and interesting insights were shared as members posed questions to Dr. Yilmaz and Lerina Bright.

One member asked Dr. Yilmaz:

"Why do you think it's an issue that persists until today?"

"The main problem is lack of understanding of the system in sport and the role of agents, athletes, and parents in this space. For me, the starting point is raising awareness through education."

"In my research, I argue that to tackle this in football, we need to educate three key players: the players; parents; and agents themselves."

"Parents need to be educated because they are involved in the decision-making process, and agents are actually influencing the parents first, before the players."

Another member asked Lerina Bright:

"As a politician, what would you like me to do?"

"The root cause is poverty and lack of opportunities at source countries."

"Specifically, we must improve sports infrastructure. If this is improved, it allows young people to stay home longer so they don't make the journey abroad."

"Once the talent is developed at home, they are worth a lot more once they move to America or Europe. So, starting with whatever can be done to improve the training sports capabilities and stadiums - you have a lot of legislative power."

"At the moment, there is not enough governance and accountability at a national level with respect to sports."

"If there are provisions that can be included towards protecting young people's opportunities and regulating agents at a national level, that would go a long way."

"We must improve sports infrastructure.

If this is improved, it allows young people to stay home longer so they don't make the journey abroad."

CPA UK's Modern Slavery Project: Four Years in the Making

Alex Norris MP (left) and Dr. Rose Broad (right) speaking at the launch event.

The CPA UK Modern Slavery Project ran from 2016 to 2020, and while this report seeks to assess the project, it also seeks to provide practical advice and support to parliaments in the development of their antitrafficking and anti-slavery work.

What was the impact of the Project?

The findings in the report show there are three main areas of impact.

The first area of impact is Networking and Collaboration. Across all the interviews, participants reported they found value in creating networks with other participants through the Project's workshops and events. Many of these connections were feeding into the participant's ongoing anti-trafficking and anti-slavery work.

The second theme is Policy Development. Parliamentarians who engaged with the Project reported that they gained knowledge that contributed to local and regional projects within their home countries, as well as informing nuances in legislation.

One Parliamentarian from Pakistan recalled:

"I attended sessions...I went to our laws, I noticed flaws, I drafted a new act. I brought a new act and today it is finally passed"

Another Parliamentarian from Kenya shared that, through the workshops, they have:

"...gained knowledge on drafting and implementing effective legislation against modern slavery" and "consequently educated our people on vital steps to ensure victims are not forgotten."

The third area of impact is Creating New Perspectives through Awareness Raising and Expanding Knowledge.

Throughout many interviews, participants talked about increasing awareness creating an impetus to focus on work in those areas.

One Parliamentarian from the UK said:

"I can say to brands 'I've seen this, I've spoken to these people... So, what are you going to do about it?"

Another Parliamentarian from Kenya retold how:

"After attending the trainings by the CPA UK, I got the urge to organise a regional sporting event in my area, which attracted over 1000 soccer, under the theme Stop Football Trafficking"

It was not just Parliamentarians who found the workshops helpful: a representative from an international non-governmental organisation operating across the UK, Africa, and the Caribbean said:

"I found this engagement with the parliamentarians very, very useful... We were also requested by an MP to help her draft...something that she could present on the floor of parliament"

What happens next?

Following the impact of the pandemic, many participants highlighted a need for re-focusing attention on tackling modern slavery, human trafficking, and forced labour.

Areas highlighted for re-focusing attention include:

- Corporate engagement;
- Increased involvement of criminal justice and border staff;
- Legislative workshops;
- A continued need to understand the problem in relation to cultural and country-specific contexts;
- Greater access to and sharing of data;
- Greater public awareness.

For greater detail on the areas highlighted, as well as opportunities for future work, make sure to read the 'Future Work and Recommendations' section of the report.

Assessing the Impact of Modern Slavery Legislation and Increased Awareness in Parliament through the CPA UK

What is the impact of the Modern Slavery Project?

This research has aimed to assess the impact of the CPA UK Modern Slavery Project. The findings show there are three main themes of impact:

Networking and Collaboration

Across all our interviews, participants found value in creating networks with people through our workshops and events. Many of these connections were feeding into participants' ongoing antitrafficking and anti-slavery work.

A parliamentarian from the UK said:

"The networking and exchanging information and experiences about legislation allowed us to 'stand on each other's shoulders"

Policy Development

Through our workshops, Parliamentarians gained knowledge that contributed to local and regional projects in their home countries, as well as informing nuances in legislation.

A parliamentarian from Pakistan said:

"I attended sessions...I went to our laws, I noticed flaws, I drafted a new act. I brought a new act and today it is finally passed"

A Parliamentarian from Kenya said:

"...I have gained knowledge on drafting and implementing effective legislation against modern slavery. I have consequently educated our people on vital steps to ensure victims are not forgotten."

Awareness Raising and Expanding Knowledge - Creating New Perspectives

Throughout most interviews, participants talked about the increased awareness they gained during project events. This expansion in knowledge also created an impetus to focus work in those areas.

A parliamentarian from the UK said:

"I can say to brands, "I've seen this, I've spoken to these people...So what are you going to do about it?"

A parliamentarian from Kenya said:

"After attending the trainings by the CPA, I got the urge to organise a regional sporting event in my area, which attracted over 1000 soccer clubs, under the theme stop football trafficking"

An NGO operating across the UK, Africa, and Caribbean said:

"...I found this engagement with the parliamentarians very, very useful, and even impactful... We were also requested by an MP to help her draft...something that she could present on the floor of parliament"
